An examination of the hypothesis advanced in a recent publication, entitled "Palmoromaics." Maintaining, in opposition thereto, that the text of the Elzewir Greek Testament is not a translation from the Latin: and vindicating the originality of that text which is preserved in the Greek manuscripts of the apostolical writings, and in the works of the Greek fathers collectively. With observations, illustrative of many words, in less frequent use, employed by the aposteles, as well as of the general character of their style. By the Rev. William Grant Broughton ...
